Professional Experience

Josh has worked in JunHe's Shanghai and is currently based in the firm's New York office. He is admitted to practice law in the State of New York and is qualified to practice PRC law. With professional experience in both jurisdictions, Josh regularly advises clients on legal issues that arise in complex cross-border matters involving China and the United States.

Josh's practice focuses on cross-border corporate transactions and regulatory matters. He advises on both U.S. and Chinese corporate law and has been involved in numerous international transactions across a range of industries. He regularly represents Fortune 500 companies and multinational enterprises in connection with their operations in China, including strategic investments, acquisitions, reorganizations, and divestitures. His work frequently involves coordinating legal issues across multiple jurisdictions and assisting clients in navigating regulatory and compliance requirements in China.

Josh also advises Chinese companies and investors conducting business in the United States. His experience includes assisting clients with market entry strategies, corporate establishment, cross-border investments, corporate governance matters, and regulatory compliance. He also provides support in disputes and other matters that arise in the course of Chinese companies' operations and investments in the U.S.

In addition to his corporate practice, Josh advises family offices and ultra-high-net-worth individuals on international wealth planning matters. His work in this area includes generational wealth planning, asset protection strategies, and the structuring, allocation, and restructuring of international assets. He frequently assists clients whose assets, family members, and business interests span multiple jurisdictions, particularly between China and the United States.
